And If The Lone Young Man In The Big City Has A Singing Voice Then For Miles Around All The Ladies Who Never Knew One Note From Another ("Hain't Touched A Piano For Years, My Dear")—Will Volunteer To Play His Accompaniments.

The Boyhood Chum From Home Who Wants To Be Entertained. Wants To See The Bright Lights And The Wild Women!

One Of The Biggest Factors In The Life Of The Lone Young Man In The Great City Is The Beautiful Lady Who Simply Insists On Adding A Few Feminine Touches To His Cheerless Rooms. And If He Has Any Socks That Need Darning Or Any Ties That Want Pressing She'll Be Only Too Glad To Drop In Any Time.

"Blessed Are The Pure In Heart." A Window Shade In The Life Of The Lone Young Man In A Big City Is Something Never To Be Pulled Down.

The Lone Young Man Is Always In Demand Whenever A Last Moment Dinner Guest Or An Extra Of Any Sort Is Needed To Fill In. More Often Than Not It's Hard Work Being A Filler-in. Take Searles, For Instance. He Is Doing His Bit Entertaining The Elderly Miss Russ, Who Is A Little Bit Deaf. "I Think Your Mother Has Such A Lovely Face," Searles Is Saying. Then, When Searles Has Repeated A Couple Of Times, Miss Russ Will Come Back With "Yes, Indeed, We Think It Very Lovely. We Found It By The Roadside And Brought It Home, And Now It Covers Our Entire Porch!"

"No, Shelby, Not! Not! That's What The Horse Says. Now, Tell Uncle Roger What The Kitty Says." Poor Uncle Roger Is A Lonely Bachelor In The Big City. He Is Being Given A Touch Of Home Life Over The Week-end. After Dinner Roger's Hostess Will Make Up Her Mind That Roger Is To Marry One Of Her Dearest Friends—"A Perfectly Lovely Girl. So Sweet And Wholesome."

The Folks From Home Who Are In For A Few Days And Expect The Lone Young Man To Do The Honors. Bud Is Going To Run Over To Princeton For A Few Days, And Meanwhile Mattie Will Need Some One To Take Her Around Town. Mattie Wants To See All The Expensive Shows And Cabarets.

The Untidy Roommate And The Washed V. B. D.'s Very Annoying To And Orderly Young Man.

The Temptations Of A Great City. Married Ladies, Whose Husbands Don't Understand Them, Are A Daily Menace To The Young Man Alone And Unprotected In A Big City. Some Day, They Explain To Whomever Will Lend An Unwilling Ear, They Will Leave Charlie, Or Herbert, For Good And Go In For Romance On The Grand Scale—When The Right Man Comes Along.

The City Is Full Of People Just Aching To Make The Lonely Young Man Less Lonely. Miss Moriarty, The Waitress, Is Doing Her Best For A Young Man Who Wants To Read His Paper. Miss Moriarty Is Saying A Great Deal About How She Loves The Movies And Parks, And Walks In The Gloaming, And Such.

A Lone Young Man In A Big City, Where Nobody Cares, Is Wholly At The Mercy Of Landladies Who Have Seen Better Days. They Love To Stop By And Tell About How In The Old Days Before Will Lost His Money They Used To Keep Fourteen Servants, etc.
